

Jennifer Seaver Stokes of Tuned In Coaching to be Featured on Close-Up Talk Radio

CARMEL, INDIANA, USA, September 12, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Emotional intelligence refers to our ability to perceive, control and evaluate our emotions. Few activities require emotional intelligence more than the performance of music. In performance, we become completely attuned to others. The more we understand our environment and the strengths of ourselves and others, the more likely we are to deliver an inspiring performance.

As a classically trained pianist, music has always been a passion for Jennifer Seaver Stokes. Though she still teaches music, she's since incorporated coaching techniques to expand her services and inspire even more people. Today, Jennifer is the founder of Tuned In Coaching, dedicated to "connecting you with your inner genius."

"I see myself as an inspiring performance specialist," says Jennifer. "Most people are leading their life from a seat in the orchestra, but you are the composer and the conductor. Once you know your strengths and invest in your natural talents, you can access your inner resources for success."

Jennifer works with her clients by focusing on "the music of their lives." Where are they finding harmony? Dissonance? Rhythm? Melody? Where are they being their most creative?

Finally, what energy are they projecting to those around them? If you can identify your strengths and master your energy, that emotional intelligence will allow you to connect with your inner genius and manifest greatness in your life.

Jennifer says she works primarily with business executives who are in some kind of crisis or transition. They're either afraid of losing their current job or have recently lost a job and need a strategic partner to move them forward in their personal and professional lives. She says most individuals in the business world have never had an opportunity to develop these crucial intuitive skills.

“As a musician, I’ve had a private coach every week of my life,” says Jennifer. “My coaching comes from my experience in the music field and I’m using those skills and experiences to help even more people. I focus on their natural talents to help them understand what they bring to the table so they can get a new job or find a new relationship. It’s very fulfilling.”
