

Interactive Global Solutions Announces a 10% Discount on their HR Training Program

Training provider unveils discounts for their upcoming program to thank all stakeholders who have supported them.

SINGAPORE CITY, SINGAPORE, September 24, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Interactive Global Solutions announced today that they would be giving up to 10 % discount when you sign up for their training programs. This would be in addition to existing early bird and group discounts already offered by them earlier. This offer is to thank all stakeholders who have supported Interactive Global Solutions to date.

One of the master class that they would be holding would be on HR Planning, Measurement and Analytics Using A Strategy Map and Scorecard Supported by Big Data. Interactive Global Solutions shares further on why this training program could be critical to you and your HR.

Training, hiring, firing all constitute part of a workforce's needs in order for it to progress. This has become the circle of life. A workforce needs to hire the best people, offload bench-warmers, and to advocate continuous training in order to be on top of its game. Unfortunately, it does not end there. Most companies don't just rely on these requisites anymore. They are smart enough to know that in a workforce, relevant information is critical to know where they are heading, how they are going to head there, potential bottlenecks along the way and what is in store at the end.

Sounds cliché? Your car may be fitted with the Marbella GPS. It requires you to key in the start and end points, and it will do the rest and plan the route, how long it will take to get you there, potential congestion along the way and propose alternative routes to get you there on time. The ideal HR of a company works exactly that way, if not more. An effective HR needs to be able to measure its capabilities to maximize the effectiveness of its strategy and operation. Often overlooked, it still remains as one of many HR's weakest link to date. They have to get the right man in, get the right training for him and he will be an asset to the organization.

Now, is your HR on the right track? Analytics is just as important. You don't buy a Marbella GPS and expects it to function on its own. A Marbella by itself is nothing. Until you use the features it has, to provide you with all the information you need and this information then takes you to places. The information is so important that without it, you would certainly miss that important meeting you have had scheduled. The right use of analytics can take your organization to places too. HR just needs to know how analytics can help them to recruit the best talent, where to get them and how much they need to be paid. The list goes on.

Interactive Global Solutions would like to share more with you on the use of analytics and measurement to benefit your HR. Join Jon Ingham, the expert speaker on this topic, as he shares with you how analytics and measurement can help enhance a HR's professional capability.
