

Magic Logix Launches DocResponse.com

Magic Logix just launched a new website for DocResponse that is one of a kind in the world of medical websites.

DALLAS, TX, USA, September 29, 2014 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Magic Logix just launched a new website for DocResponse that is one of a kind in the world of medical websites. Additionally, the brand new DocResponse.com is fully responsive and conforms to all mobile, tablet and desktop devices.

The cornerstone of this site is a fully interactive avatar app on the homepage. It allows the user to identify their gender (male or female) and their age class (adult or child) and select problem areas based on their symptoms. As a result, the patient is able to arrive at a diagnosis in just a few short clicks.

Web users will choose from multiple anatomical views after identifying their symptoms. They can toggle between internal medicine, orthopedic and dermatological views. After selecting the desired view, the user is then guided through symptom specific questions. Based on their answers, a results page suggests potential actions to address the specific problem and a list of other possible diagnoses.

The website was constructed with a variety of technical specifications. Regarding the site's framework, Wordpress 4.0 was the CMS of choice, while Magic Logix built a custom PHP application to handle the questionnaire and evaluation engine. Coding specifics include the following:

- PHP 5 custom application on the back end
- HTML5 animation to select through different avatars
- CSS3 animations, transitions and JQuery on the Front-end
- LESS framework for CSS
- Responsive Design to support all devices

Additionally, the website features social integration that incorporates DocResponse's social channels and creates a sense of community by giving patients the opportunity to be featured on the site resulting from their support of DocResponse on social media.
