Sanftec's Affirms Value of Political Neutrality
Data Center Solution Provider Sees Digital Economy as Global, Non-Partisan

NEW YORK, NY – October 1st, 2014 – Sanftec, a trusted data center solution provider for many of the world's leading enterprises, today affirmed its organizational commitment to political neutrality, a position that is appropriate as well as advantageous for its growing government business portfolio. The company, which consults on data center design, configuration, and construction worldwide, believes that a successful data center provider must be able to work with all political entities in any particular region and effect a mode of neutrality for the benefit of all stakeholders.

"Everyone says that you have to be friends with this person or that person, and by extension not be friends with some other individual, to make a deal in a given country," said Henry Beaucejour, Founder and CEO of Sanftec. "Believe me, nothing could be further from the truth. We don't work that way. The digital economy is inherently non-partisan. Real business gets done in global IT when you put all that kind of nonsense aside and focus on building trust and value over the long term." Beaucejour added that his team has been in contact with seven different political parties in Haiti and 10 in other region around the globe in the last month. But nothing concrete on the table as per of our lawyer.

Sanftec has built its business since 2006 by furthering information-driven economies. The company is active in 15 markets on multiple continents, collaborating with governments throughout the world and the Caribbean. Sanftec also did a project for the Obama Campaign in 2012. Data center solutions from Sanftec are oriented toward protecting and connecting the digital economy through a rich, interconnected ecosystem of the top networks, carriers, ISPs, and business partners around the world. Data center operations are standardized to give customers the highest level of reliability regardless of location.
