

Best Web Hosting Providers Adds New Blog to Redesigned Website

Best Web Hosting Providers announces the launch of a new technical blog that will be an integral part of their new, redesigned website.

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, October 10, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Best Web Hosting Providers announced today that their online publication has been completely redesigned and will now include a new technical blog. Visitors to the new site will find an efficient layout that is easier to read and much simpler to navigate, making for a much improved overall experience for the viewer. In addition, a new blog has been added to the site, which will provide useful news and information from the web hosting industry.

Best Web Hosting Providers has been reviewing and evaluating web hosting companies since 2010. They are the top source for independent information for anyone that is shopping for web hosting solutions for their website. The reviews posted by the Best Web Hosting Providers experts help provide readers with the information they need to make the best hosting decisions for their websites.

Founder of Best Web Hosting Providers, Jay Douglas, said this about the newly designed website, "We are constantly working hard to provide our readers with not only the best web hosting reviews, but now, with our new blog, we will also keep them up to date on breaking news and tips in the web hosting industry."

The new Best Web Hosting Providers blog will provide better, more useful content to help webmasters stay on top of the latest web hosting technologies. The blog will also contain informative posts on related topics, such as search engine optimization (SEO) and web design best practices, all intended to help webmasters be more successful in their businesses. To date, two technical writers have been brought onboard and two additional bloggers will also be added to update the web hosting tutorials section of the blog.

"We love web hosting and we are confident that our new website will better highlight our outstanding, unbiased reviews, making it easier for consumers to find the right hosting company," added Douglas.
