VANCOUVER, CANADA, November 10, 2014

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Ever since sweat pants were first introduced around 90 years ago, they have been made from cotton or polyester, typically fitted very loose and baggy. Intended for sport activities and home-comfort, people has since enjoyed the comfort of sweat pants in many situations.

Since its introduction, sweat pants have been built a bad reputation for public use. Being the butt-end of the joke on Seinfeld (1992), labelled as pants that tell the world "I give up. I can't compete in normal society. I'm miserable, so I might as well be comfortable." This is perhaps attributed to their typical baggy fit, and its nature to absorb sweat and odor.

Recently, a promotional video was released through the company's Kickstarter campaign – showcasing its prototypes on two athletes in various situations, from working out at the gym, sprinting, playing basketball, football and just how they look casually.

Also showcased in the video were merino wool's odor repelling and temperature regulating abilities, which highlights how each individual fiber is uniquely scaled to repel odor-causing bacteria. And its temperature regulating abilities were used by Arctic explorers, climbers of Mount Everest and tribesman in the deserts of Egypt.

Introducing Style to Sweat Pants Without Compromising Comfort

On All Season Sweat's Kickstarter campaign, they claim merino wool is incredibly soft which should be expected of sweat pants. The unexpected is their design showcased in the campaign and promotional video, they are very uniquely shaped and styled unlike traditional sweat pants. It details ribbed ankle cuffs, a tapered fit, drop crotch, outer spine structure, zippered fly, gun metal draw string stoppers and hidden pockets.

Although the video showcases two athletes – the video claim they will be perfect for those who just enjoy wearing sweat pants at home to those who train intensely at the gym. So All Season Sweats is not just an active wear, but can be worn casually as well.
