HESPERIA, CA, USA, November 22, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Every 10 years or more a fighter will come on to the scene in dominant fashion and convincingly take apart opponents on a regular basis. On Saturday night one of the top 3 pound for pound boxers since the year 2000 returns to the ring, as Manny Pacquiao goes head to head with Chris Algieri.

After his one punch knockout loss to Juan Manuel Marquez on December, 8, 2012, the Pacman put on two consecutive impressive performances with wins over Brandon Rios and Timothy Bradley. In both fights, Pacquiao, was flat out dominant en route to Unanimous Decision victories.

With a potential super fight with pound for pound king Floyd Mayweather as his next bout, the Pacman can not afford to come up short on Saturday night. According to reports from witnesses that attended training camp, the WBO Champion has not looked this good since 2009, when he stopped Miguel Cotto in the final round of their 2009 bout.

Major upsets in the sport of boxing are rare, but it happens. Chris Algieri, will enter the ring as a unknown to most boxing enthusiasts from across the globe, and will have a golden opportunity to pull off one of the biggest upsets in recent years.

What makes Algieri a threat to Pacquiao? The 30 year old comes in to the fight at 5' 10" in height and works behind a tremendous jab, along with underrated boxing skills. If Algieri expects to pull off the upset, he will need to keep Pacquiao off balance with consistent movement, and use his reach. If he makes the mistake of staying in front of the Pacman and decides to trade punches, Algieri could end up flat on his back and down for the count.
