GREENWOOD, IN. -- , UNITED STATES, November 27, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- GREENWOOD, IN. -- Indiana author Frieda Dowler has sealed the deal with Tate Publishing to start the publication of her new book "Heaven Bound in a Hollywood World"

"Heaven Bound in a Hollywood World" centers on challenging readers to view life to God's standards as opposed to the standards of culture. Dowler symbolizes 'Heaven' as God and 'Hollywood' as the standards of culture.

"As a hairstylist for thirty years, I've worked with women daily and heard their struggles with life and relationships. I wanted to write something to challenge young women to seek God for their purpose in life rather than become who others expect them to be... Five years ago, I committed to passing on to others what I've learned in my pursuit of God. I began a small group for young women and later led a workshop on this subject. As my interest in writing grew, I decided to put it in book form to reach more young Christian women. I've worked on the manuscript for three years, completing it in October 2014," shares Dowler.

"Dowler shares with us this encouraging developmental write-up that allows readers to contemplate, pray, journalize, and help give purpose to life.
