

New Zealand No Jet Lag Travel Palliative Manufacturer Seeks National US Retail Distributor

Andrew Criglington, No Jet Lag founder, told EIN Presswire that he is now open to suggestion on supplying a major North American retail chain with his products

HASTINGS, HAWKE'S BAY, NEW ZEALAND, December 24, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- New Zealand No Jet Lag Travel Palliative Manufacturer Seeks National US Retail Distributor

The world's leading manufacturer of homeopathic travel medication is now seeking to supply the major United States retail chains.

Andrew Criglington, founder of No Jet Lag told EIN Presswire that he was now open to suggestion on supplying a major North American retail chain with his products. According to Criglington, until just recently he had been reluctant to supply into a major multiple.

Criglington cited the need to maintain quality control over his flagship product No Jet Lag as the main reason that he had restricted sales in North America to specialty outlets. In fact his company supplies over 1,800 retailers and also REI the specialist in adventure travel. He said that these specialist outlets were focused on travel and were thus in a position to counsel and advice their specialist clients on No Jet Leg and its properties.

According to Criglington the level of interest in and knowledge about homeopathic treatments in the United States had now reached the stage at which there was a general public comprehension of the implications and benefits. He said also that long-distance travelers qualified themselves because they were aware of the rigors of jet movement.

No Jet Lag was established in New Zealand 20 years ago and is considered to have 15% percent market share of the global travel palliatives market.
