The teams expected to participate in the January 1, 2015 College Football playoffs are Alabama, Ohio State, Oregon and Florida State. The winner of each game will advance to the final game of the season, and face off in the College Football playoff National Championship game.

Oregon and Florida State will kickoff the the playoffs with the Rose Bowl, which is expected to get underway at 5pm eastern time, from Pasadena, CA. The Ducks come in to this matchup ranked No.2 overall in the nation, and with a record of 12-1. Heisman trophy winner Marcus Mariota leads a Oregon team that is riding high on eight game winning streak, and coming off a impressive 51-13 win over the Arizona Wildcats in the Pac 12 championship game.

Mariota, has been nothing short of spectacular, as the junior out of Honolulu, Hi finished with the one of the most efficient seasons in College Football history. The QB passed for 3,783 yards, 38 TD's, and only 2 interceptions on the season. With a supporting cast that features Pac 12 offensive freshman of the year Royce Freeman, the Ducks have the necessary tools to come away victorious in the semifinals, and championship day.

Florida State, enters as the No. 3 team in the country and comes in with a impressive undefeated record of 13-0, and ranked third overall in the nation in passing. Senior WR Rashan Green, had another solid season with 93 receptions for 1,307 and 7 TD's. The wideout is projected to be selected in either the third or fourth round of the 2015 NFL draft.

The second College Football playoff game of the day will feature the No.1 Alabama Crimson Tide going head to head with the No.4 Ohio State Buckeyes in the Sugar Bowl. The semifinal contest is set to start at 8:30 ET. Alabama, ranked third overall in total points allowed per contest at 16.6 points a game, and on a eight game a winning streak. On the offensive side of the field, the Crimson Tide are led by Amari Cooper. The 6-1, 201 lb wideout, is considered one of the top receivers in the nation, and expected to be a top 10 selection at the 2015 NFL draft.

Can Ohio State pull off the upset? The Buckeyes, are physical in the trenches on the offensive end of the field and have arguably the best running game in College Football. Ohio State, averaged 45.2 points a game on the season, and running back Ezekiel Elliott will be one of the keys to victory.
