

True Stories With A Twist, Comedy and Music Create An Unusual Evening Of Entertainment On Long Island

(mostly) TRUE THINGS features true stories told without notes, but 3 include little white lies. The whole truth comes out by the end with the audience's help.

SMITHTOWN, NY, UNITED STATES, March 3, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- (mostly) TRUE THINGS features comedy, heart and the opportunity to learn about life experiences to which everyone can relate through stories shared without notes in front of a live audience by storytellers from very different walks of life. The next performance is on Saturday March 21 2015 at 7 pm, at Performing Arts Studio of New York, 224 E. Main St., Port Jefferson, NY 11777. Tickets are $10, available at the door or online at EventBrite. Reservations are recommended. Call 631-366-4265 to reserve seats and pay at the door. (mostly) TRUE THINGS features 4 stories, 3 of which include little white lies or carefully-crafted fabrications. The audience has an opportunity to question the storytellers about the details in the stories, then votes. Audience members who correctly choose the whole-truth teller get a prize, then the whole truth about each story is revealed. New York Newsday featured this monthly show in a 2-page article on November 20, 2014.

Host and creator Jude Treder-Wolff is a writer/performer whose original solo show Crazytown: my first psychopath told the story of her encounter with a manipulative, deceptive person while working in psychiatry early in her career as a creative arts psychotherapist. Crazytown was selected for the 2013 Midtown International Theater Festival, the 2012 Chicago and San Francisco Fringe Festivals, had 2 successful runs at Actors Theatre Workshop in New York and was performed at The Peoples Improv Theater, The Charles B Wang Center at Stonybrook University and The Conservatory NJ in Trenton, NJ. Treder-Wolff is also a singer/songwriter who co-wrote and performs a theme song for (mostly)

Local storytelling shows feature stories about our neighbors, our co-workers, our kids and our towns, stories about life-changing moments that can be hilarious and heart-breaking. Sharing stories is powerful for both storytellers and listeners, and is a way to enhance social connections and build community. Storytelling shows are one of the fastest-growing and popular forms of entertainment today. Podcasts based on true stories - like The Moth, RISK!, This American Life and others - are among the most popular choices on iTunes, generating millions of downloads from around the world.
