

New Project to Fund Safe, 100% Pure Plastic

New Premier Bowls to remove the risk of perils from animal byproducts and chemicals in plastic.

FAIRFIELD, NEW JERSEY, US, March 17, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In light of many new illnesses and serious health problems being identified with plastics with regard to food safety, a new KICKSTARTER program has been initiated. The company behind the campaign is Premier Classic Products based in Fairfield, NJ. They have determined that harmful chemicals and animal byproducts leach into food from plastic packaging and storage containers. They have developed a set of containers that are ideal for vegans, muslims, kosher practitioners, health advocates and others. The parent company has invested over one million dollars to this cause and now is seeking fund to produce these containers in large quantities for those key audiences.

With the rise in all kinds of diseases in the past 50 years to nearly epidemic levels even without scientific evidence of harm, the company has taken the position of "Why take the risk?" They plan on expanding the offering to the healthcare industry to include items like blood bags, inspection devices, medicine containers, gelatin capsules and anything that can come in contact with the human body (including skin creams, makeup, et al.)

The goal is to raise $30,000 by pledges of $100 each for which the donor will receive in turn a set of nine containers with lids worth $49.50 at retail. A donor just has to go to www.kickstarter.com and put in "vegan plastic containers" to make a pledge. There is virtually no competition in the marketplace for these products which are pure to one part per several billion.
