About Alindra Villa

Taken from the Sanskrit language of Hindu - India, the word Alindra is an architectural term for a Hindu temple, which specifically represents 'heights'. The connection of this name is seen in the architectural heights that surround the area. A tall Balinese style "gapura" entrance is a landmark and delivers that indigenous welcome experience; a traditional 'kulkul' is also part of the complex which is a Balinese style of social living and architecture; overall, in each unit, there are blends.
