

Chandra Leigh Brown Shows Why Disabilities Don't Matter When it Comes to Personal Growth

Former International Chairperson, Disabled Individuals for Oprah Winfrey's Nobel Peace Prize Fan club has a soul of a survivor

ATLANTA, GA, USA, April 19, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Atlanta's Inspirational Speaker, Chandra Leigh Brown delivers real value to her attendees during her dynamic keynotes and workshops. She is now booking American cities her publicist, Fran Briggs announced today.

Chandra Brown speaks candidly and courageously on topics such as care giving, overcoming obstacles, and the rights of the disabled and differenly-abled. She also presents to survivors of rape, and alcoholics in recovery.

More than a decade ago, the Atlanta resident was hit during a horrendous car accident. She was ejected through the window. Brown suffered multiple fractures and a severe brain injury.

While on life support, she was not expected to live. Chandra says it was while she was in this state of unconsciousness that she became determined to "go back" because she had things to do.

"Since my accident, I have taken what I learned from sports, and applied it to my life living with a brain injury," explained Chandra Brown. "I call it the conditioning and discipline part. Fall down 7 times; get back up 8 times. No pain, no gain. I could never give up. I thrive on challenges."

Chandra completed three years of physical and cognitive therapy (which included relearning the alphabet and how to tie her shoes).

"The first thing I did after I fully understood the severity of what happened after my accident was to have a talk with myself. I told myself that I could still do anything." - Chandra Leigh Brown

While it's true that she has not fully recovered from the extent of her injuries, she speaks with a clear, calm, and upbeat voice, and enjoys working out and eating healthy. Her personal nature includes a heightened sense of humor, and an infectious smile and laugh.

Today, she advocates and shows why disabilities don't matter when it comes to personal growth.

Brown has resolved to help this segment of the population with their plight for living in a more equitable society.

Her presentations are customized for rehabilitation centers; conferences; organizations; schools; and hospitals. She speaks to adolescents and adults. Chandra also works with women groups, individuals; rehabilitation institutions; community outreach programs and other wellness centers.
