"Resonance Lake" is the story of a couple in crisis that ventures in a villa on a lake to try a surprise dinner with strangers, only to discover that their guests seem to know too many secrets about their lives, not only of the past and the present, but also the future.

Inspired by the classic ghost stories about cursed houses, "Resonance Lake" brings an unexpected modern take on the supernatural thriller genre.

Giacomo Arrigoni has won several international awards with his short films, especially "Into the Gloom”, a short about violence against women selected at the Italian Silver Ribbons, nominated for an Italian Golden Globe and screened at the Italian Chamber of Deputies in Rome.
