

Network with an array of major pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies at Clinical Trial Logistics, 20-21 May 2015

Engage with key opinion leaders as they discuss supply chain security, temperature monitoring, and reflect on the globalisation of clinical trial logistics.

LONDON, ENGLAND, UNITED KINGDOM, May 18, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Developments in clinical trial logistics are accelerating rapidly with trials now occurring in more than 13 strategic and emerging markets with eyes on the improvement of global health and patient care. The demand for clinical trial supply and logistics has gone global with increased outsourcing, with a predicted forecast of $14.3bn by 2017.

Against this backdrop, SMI's 9th annual Clinical Trial Logistics conference will gather an audience of industry professionals involved in clinical trial supply and logistics and provide the ideal platform for key opinion leaders to discuss, assess and analyse supply chain security, temperature monitoring and reflect on the globalisation of clinical trial logistics. The 2015 agenda features a case study driven presentations delivered by senior industry decision makers from companies including Takeda, Sanofi-Aventis, GSK, PAREXEL and more.

Benefits of attending:

- Build and enhance your understanding of integrating temperature tracking at the site, analyse how data is coming into the system, review temperature monitoring of shipments, and the use of electronic labels
- Assess how to cut costs in clinical trial supply logistics with our interactive roundtable discussions
- Gain insights from our KOLs on how to maintain an efficient supply chain and hear case studies from leading pharmaceutical companies and CROs on planning and forecasting for clinical trials to ensure you're working together to build a robust partnership
- Develop an understanding of the regulatory, GCP & GMP requirements to control the qualification and validation of products through their life cycle
- Assess the globalisation of clinical trial logistics and review how companies are maintaining their standards of quality in emerging countries with a panel discussion
