

Sunnyside Station Launches Coworking Crowdfunding Campaign to Secure Space

New Denver Local Coworking Business Sets To Raise $24,000 through Crowdfunding to Secure Space in Sunnyside Neighborhood.

DENVER, CO, UNITED STATES, June 8, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Denver, CO – Sunnyside Station, a new venture for entrepreneur Nicole Skorka, announced the launch of their seed round funding campaign hosted on their website at SunnysideStation.com effective June 8, 2015. The company has set a goal of $24,000 to launch their business based on initial space costs. The business recently finished in the top 15 of Jake Jabs Center For Entrepreneurship

Business Plan Competition and is planning on keeping the momentum to open the space by October 2015.

The launch of the campaign has been aligned with Denver's Coworking Week; where people can learn more about coworking at events throughout the city. Many local coworking spaces are offering free workdays along with educational and social events that showcase what makes each space different and special. Sunnyside Station will be a new addition to the coworking market in Denver, focusing on encouraging a cooperative environment where freelancers and remote workers can connect with peers and their community.

Crowdfunding has gone on to be one of the faster ways to launch a company and earlier this year creative crowdfunding platform Kickstarter announced they had hit the US$ 1 Billion mark through crowdfunded projects. For Sunnyside Station, crowdfunding is a way to prove that their neighborhood wants and will support this coworking space to potential landlords and investors. The campaign will offer perks for pledging that include discounted membership rates for people interested in moving in, and merchandise for neighbors that want to show their support. Corporate sponsorships are also available as the company looks to furnish and renovate the space
