

Author Richard Corey shares key success concepts in "The Blueprint"

Author Richard Corey helps readers redefine their ability to succeed with a high mathematical certainty in his selfhelp book, "The Blueprint."

DAVIE, FLA., USA, June 16, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Author Richard Corey helps readers redefine their ability to succeed with a high mathematical certainty in his self-help book, "The Blueprint," by revealing the key steps that would make anybody's vision into a reality.

About the book:

Based on the Theory of Relativity, human beings are incapable of acquiring any goal or object that they cannot relate to. Thus, whatever goes on inside ones imagination has to essentially be linked to something tangible or possible. Using a fictional character's story, Corey instills in readers the core belief system of an idea that constitutes of limitless greatness and ability – a character trait that lies

'The Blueprint' isn't a dispassionate third-person analysis: it's a candid, selfinfused and vibrant celebration of change that... [is] a call to action for others to achieve their highest goals. Midwest Book Review within everyone yet commonly forgotten. Through mathematical principles and deductive logic, readers will learn to engineer a strategic and structural plan of action to let them bridge the gap between their current reality and the idyllic existence in their imagination. Each chapter questions the perception that makes it more appropriate for each reader, indicating that "The Blueprint" is a customizable formula.

"I truly believe greatness exists in all men and women alike," shares Corey. "[I] hope the Blueprint helps others share that belief."

At it's core, Corey believes the book centers on excellence. "If I could describe the Blueprint's theme in 3 words it would be: Actively Pursuing Excellence," says Corey. "The entire purpose of this book is to appeal to the reader's core belief system and instill an optimistic hope within them so that they wake up each day motivated to better themselves."

Midwest Book Review branded Corey's write-up to be "Couched in the author's personal vision and experience, 'The Blueprint' is replete with admonitions and observations... Readers will discover that The Blueprint isn't a dispassionate third-person analysis: it's a candid, self-infused and vibrant celebration of change that uses the author's first-person experiences as a call to action for others to achieve their highest goals. Its message is and its customizable approach is a welcome change from the usual self-help approach, showing how to apply God's influence and the principles of mathematical design to one's own belief system for maximum results."

Corey received his bachelor's degree in Business Management and Entrepreneurship from the University of Central Florida and a Juris Doctorate degree from Nova Southeastern University. While in law school, Corey spent three years learning the mechanics of deductive logical reasoning and how it is useful for uncovering truths as well as the answers to unsolved questions. Rather than leaving this thought process in the classroom, Corey saw an opportunity to expand upon other academics and formulate a unique approach to motivational literature. Being a highly ambitious person to begin with, Corey was going through a dark time in his life and desperately sought answers to his own existence. In doing so, he manifested the framework that is now known as "The Blueprint." Corey went on to graduate law school with honors and now runs a solo law practice in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He is actively involved in charitable fundraising as well as civil rights throughout the community. He has strong family values and spends much of his free time with his parents and his brother. He also enjoys producing music, fishing, and athletics.
