

Curian Capital Exits the Business, What Now?

Claraphi Advisory Network , LLC., reaches out to financial advisors orphaned by Curian Capital's unexpected announcement.

LAGUNA HILL, CA, UNITED STATES, August 11, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Laguna Hills-based Claraphi Advisory Network , LLC., reaches out to financial advisors orphaned by Curian Capital's unexpected announcement that it will shut down and clear out all accounts by the first quarter of next year.

Claraphi Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Vali Nasr, stated Claraphi will do everything possible to provide Curian platform clients a speedy, orderly and convenient transfer process.

"We can seamlessly help transfer your assets to our Unified Managed Account program powered by Folio Institutional's superior software as the custodian," Nasr said.

While Curian was a pioneer in providing Unified Managed Account (UMA) programs, Nasr said Claraphi has made a name for itself in customizing services to complement the individual strengths of financial advisors, and help them build the most suitable, diversified, and comprehensive portfolio for their clients.

Claraphi, he said, is one of the few programs to take full advantage of Folio Institutional's superior technology to offer comprehensive asset allocation plans to high network-worth individuals.

We can generate proposals that include both liquid and non-liquid investments. Claraphi also provides one of the most complete, flexible, and powerful aggregation tools available.”

“Not only does our suite of investment managers offer high quality liquid investment strategies, but Claraphi also conducts deep due diligence on many non-liquid offerings in most asset classes to include private equity, real estate, loan programs, oil and gas, and renewable energy,” Nasr said. “We can generate proposals that include both liquid and non-liquid investments. Claraphi also provides one of the most complete, flexible, and powerful aggregation tools available.”

Curian's departure leaves potentially thousands of dislocated advisors and investors only six months to make a decision on where to take their assets. They owe it to themselves to take a look at our high caliber investment programs, Nasr said.

Claraphi Advisory Network, LLC. is a SEC registered investment adviser simplifying and lowering the cost of responsible asset management for individuals, institutions and financial services professionals. Claraphi's principals and advisors have 100 years of combined expertise in investment products, systems and tools to improve the financial future of investors and advisors. Claraphi has offices in New York, New York; Seattle, Washington; and Laguna Hills, California.
