Play to Win, the leader in college advisory services for the student-athlete, focuses its attention on achieving the best academic and college fits for high school athletes by leveraging the student's ability to play the game.

Gary Cohn (gary@ptwsports.com), the founder of PTW, believes that parents of high school athletes must be realistic in their child's ability to play their sport professionally. "The NCAA got it right when they said that 'Most of us will go pro in something other than our sport.' Cohn adds, "While we want all our families to strive for the dream to play in the big leagues, the reality is that through baseball and an elite education, Play to Win looks to increase our clients chances of having an incredible future in life."

Last year the company hired Brian Scanlon (brian@ptwsports.com), long time coach of Babson College, to help continue and grow the mission of PTW. "If there was the perfect fit out there, we found him in Brian. Coach Scanlon has been an incredible asset to both the company and to each of our families," states Cohn. "In order to build upon that foundation, we believe we hit a homerun again with Sam Grainger. Coach Grainger is very well respected in the college baseball community and was a gifted student-athlete and coach himself."

Sam Grainger (sam@ptwsports.com) will oversee the companies events and workouts. "Having attended a number of the PTW workouts in the past, I knew firsthand how valuable they were in helping these athletes get exposure," said Grainger. Coach Scanlon noted, "Play to Win leaves nothing to chance. We are acutely aware and concerned with each families desires and needs. Each client gets our utmost attention. The addition of Coach Grainger to our team is an incredible boost to an already strong path of success."

PTW's plan to grow its events and workouts was the perfect calling for Coach Grainger. Play to Win's workouts are unique in venue, structure, format, and audience. With an unyielding desire, Gary Cohn has brought to this market a product and service that is unrivaled anywhere in the country.

"As I said with the addition of Brian Scanlon, this latest move allows us to continue to be the leader in the country. I fully expect that the balance of 2015, 2016, and well beyond, will continue to yield incredible results for our clients," concludes Cohn.
