Veer, the new widget that eases the access to every app, is now available on the App Store.

Veer is the widget thats sits in the Notification Center and let you access your favorite contacts and apps through the shortest and easiest way.

MILAN, MI, ITALY, October 7, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Ever wondered how a perfect app launcher coupled with an efficient address book would look like? Wonder no more as Veer is about to hit the app stores and pair up with Veecards, the other address book huge utility already available from Code Atlas.

The plan is pretty simple yet highly ambitious.
Address books are boring and uneventful, we know that. Why bother trying to solve such an elusive issue?
Let's do it the easy way instead, starting from everyday's habits, that is you-making-calls or you-launching-apps. Then, if you like it (and you will, scout's honor!), you will be able to extend the comfort even further, and let Veecards, the Code Atlas' twin app, organize your address book and make it auto-updating.

Your favorite contacts, ready to interact with

Veer
Veer is a simple widget that makes it both easy and fun to access your day-by-day apps, like your run-of-the-mill dialer, messengers and pretty much every other app you can imagine (the list of supported and available apps is long and always expanding).

Veer is indeed completely customizable. Choose your closest contacts and pick the apps that you use the most; it's refreshing, especially after iOS 9 and its draconian practice of deciding by itself favorites and apps that should populate the Spotlight and Siri screen.
It's so much better "to Veer" that you will forget the standard iOS cumbersome interface!

Veecards
Once tried the comfort of Veer, the guys at Code Atlas would love to capitalize on the gained trust to help users embrace easiness in their address book management vision. Veecards, the Veer twin app, does just that.
Create your virtual bizcard, send it to your friends and let the app run the cloud-based (hence crash-safe) magic of auto updating contacts. Like Veer, it's easy, surprisingly fun and satisfying, especially for the ever boring address book chores!
