LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, October 13, 2015

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The electronic pop duo, Rome Will Burn, explode on the screen with more than just a dash of theatricality in their debut music video, CHAMELEON. Recently signed with Blue Mask Records, RWB emerges as talent to be reckoned with in this dynamic video produced, directed & edited by Gavin Michael Booth, director of The Scarehouse film (Universal) and is the man behind music videos for such acts as Third Eye Blind, The Afters and Our Lady Peace to name a few.

The song was produced by David Campbell, father of both Alyssa Suede and her brother Beck, who won the Grammy in 2015 for Album of the Year.

Chameleon, like its namesake, changes colors in a passionate duel between lovers. Lyrics, melody, beats and choreography interweave to tell this story of passion bordering on hate. Electric violinist Manifesto taunts and challenges his sensual, feisty partner Alyssa Suede, with dizzying intensity. While she in turn cajoles, caresses, and dares to fight back with fury. Their battle relentlessly builds to an emotional explosion resolving only when truth is laid bare.

They... approach music video making with a ferocious energy that matches the song's driving rhythm.

Gavin Michael Booth

The director captures the story by continuously circling the duo with one camera magnifying the raw performance with stark lighting that creates a haunting visual effect.

Booth says of his experience with the duo, "Working with Rome Will Burn was a great experience. They are willing to present themselves in wild style and approach music video making with a ferocious energy that matches the song's driving rhythm.”

The video can be viewed on the official Rome Will Burn web site www.RomeWillBurn.com.
