

Has a natural elixir of youth been discovered?

Real longevity science is no longer reserved only for the rich and famous.

WORLDWIDE, WORLDWIDE, WORLDWIDE, October 19, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Revolutionary new British longevity dietary supplements announced based on longevity peptides & 40 years research

The revolutionary dietary supplements have now been launched based on longevity peptides & 40 years research into orthomolecular science, natural longevity molecules and their effect at the levels of cells, mitochondria, DNA, and components of DNA known as telomeres which, were themselves individually, the subject of a Nobel prize award in 2009 for the work of three USA scientists.

This work has culminated in the scientific recognition that telomere lengthening is associated with extending lifespan potential.

Longevity9™ and SLF9™ (Scientific Longevity Formula9™) capsules are now being made available to co-researcher club members of the Longevity Revolution™ These two latest cutting edge products contain scientifically researched longevity peptides and amino acids which are based on extensive orthomolecular and longevity research and which are found naturally in the human body.

They are being launched worldwide as dietary supplements by the British manufacturer The Longevity Revolution™ producers claim has been decades long suppression by the western pharmaceutical industry.

The two new British products have combined the best of longevity supplements as unique synergistic formulas in one capsule. which the manufacturers claim are unique world first formulas

Each bottle is recommended as a two month supply starting from £59.99 and special deals are being made available for practitioners and resellers worldwide.

Together with the launch, the manufacturer will initially be offering free worldwide home telomere measurement kits with some packages which is also a British first.

The Longevity Revolution™ now offers worldwide telomere length measurement at home using a low cost DNA saliva testing kit. Inexpensive, simple and effective without the need for a blood test or clinic appointment, the kit simply has to be returned to the laboratory for a report which can be used to identify improvements in telomere lengths when undergoing dietary supplement protocols.

The information website for the two new products is at www.scientificl longevityformula.com
