In only their first release, Rome Will Burn seems to bring enough to the table to fit perfectly into the current electro-pop mold while still doing enough to shape it themselves.

Jordin Jaz

The band consists of DJ, electric violinist, Manifesto and singer/guitarist, Alyssa Suede. The two said in a recent interview, "As a duo we're a special dichotomy." "Everybody knows that opposites attract." Well, that magnetism is definitely evidenced in the emotional range of this six song EP which includes: the explosive "Chameleon" (explicit and clean versions); tender ballad "These Three Words"; dance and feel good songs "Body Language" and "Live By the Beat" and hard hitting theatrical "Waging Romance".

David Campbell is the producer/arranger on the EP and his arrangements take these songs to a whole new level. Campbell, who has accumulated over 600 gold albums in his illustrious career, does arrangements for both his daughter, Alyssa, and his son, Beck. Beck's last album "Morning Phase" won the 2015 Grammy Album of the Year. One might only speculate on what Rome Will Burn might achieve with David's magic touch.

Also instrumental in the making of the EP: L.A. based, Swedish songwriter Johan "Jones" Wetterberg who co-produced and wrote several of the songs and C.J. Abraham, also a co-writer, who shares the

Manifesto and Alyssa Suede of Rome Will Burn

Executive Producer title with David. Abraham has written for and produced many top artists including Drake Bell, Josh Peck, and Ariana Grande. An extra bonus for the group was the guidance they received from music industry icon, Randy Jackson, who added his advice and expertise on honing the songs for radio during the recording process.

In a Pre-release review, Associated News had this to say about the band: "In only their first release, Rome Will Burn seems to bring enough to the table to fit perfectly into the current electro-pop mold while still doing enough to shape it themselves."
