

Air Ambulance International Provides Global Air Ambulance Service

A medical flights company not only flies to all US states, but also does worldwide transport of patients.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, USA, October 29, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Air Ambulance International (AAI), a leading provider in air ambulance service, not only flies to all American states, but also across the globe. Through two base of operations, one in Texas and the other in London Heathrow, coupled with fast, long-range, modern aircrafts, Air Ambulance International offers international medical flights to and from almost any area of the world.

"Our fleet of Learjets have far ranging capabilities that allow us to fly to most places across the world," said Peter Veazey, Managing Director.

In over thirty years, the company has transported patients in various countries worldwide.

More than 12 million travelers are hospitalized each year while traveling. For example, a British citizen traveling abroad who becomes critically ill or injured, and requires transport to the UK for a higher level of treatment, needs a good air ambulance service to transport the patient fast and safe as possible.

Today as more people are traveling to varied destinations, for recreation, they may be trying activities they don't usually try for example, and that could result in accidental injuries.

It's important to plan ahead in case you become critically ill or injured while traveling in a foreign country, or become hospitalized. You may need an air ambulance transport back to the United States, especially if you are too ill to fly on a commercial flight. Finding the right air ambulance service to perform the transport safe and fast from any country is important, especially if you need critical or long-term care. Air Ambulance International has the experience, the aircraft, medical equipment, and the medical crews capable of transporting patients from all across the globe.
