FORT MYERS, FL, USA, December 1, 2015

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Title Junction believes in constant progression and growth. Through this belief they came to the realization that they were ready to make changes regarding their website. If you visit Title Junction's homepage now you will still be able to view their variety of services including witness courtesy closings, for sale by owner, foreign investor services, escrow services, notary services, and even more. This assistance regarding real estate transactions will still be available however the accessibility to that information will be much easier.

In addition to this, the website's featured images and navigation will be enhanced drastically. Jennifer Ferri, owner and operator of Title Junction says, "We live in an age where people often turn to the internet for their first impressions of a business. We think our new website is a representation of our development over the past ten years and think our clients will agree."

Anxiety oftentimes plays a role in web development for many business owners as logos, style, and arrangement of a page can significantly take a toll on a potential client's experience. "We are more excited rather than anxious due to the time and effort we have placed in this. We've spent evenings at the office making sure we are phrasing our presented statements correctly while ensuring all of our qualification and services are visible as well," says Jennifer.

This Fort Myers Title Company has also ensured that their new website contains information on Best Practices encouraged by the new TRID changes so that consumers and associates have the ability to view the quality and pride Title Junction takes in their work to serve the entire state of Florida.
