Just What Dad Kneeds This Christmas

The hardest people to buy Christmas gifts for are Dads, which is why they end up with socks and undies, but support of a different kind might change all that.

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, USA, December 21, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A recently released new sports and exercise support for ageing knees could be the answer to the "what on earth do we get for your Father?" conundrum this holiday season.

The EzyFit Knee Brace has received rave reviews after only a few weeks on the market and most of the feedback is coming from the men folk.

Jason had knee problems since high school and his doctor suggested he wear a brace for strenuous activity which can be uncomfortable, but he found it to be easy to "secure it over your clothes and still about to move freely".

Most braces or sleeves are bulky or uncomfortable and because they cover a joint, tend to move about and slip, but not this brace.

Jason went on to say "the velcro holds really well through out the day" enabling him to wear it without worry.

The biggest drawback of a knee brace is the slipping and movement, requiring constant adjustment during exercise, likely to drive your man crazy.

Christian, who has a damaged Meniscus tried the EzyFit knee brace and reported that during exercise he didn't have to readjust it too much which was a "definite plus"

A knee brace as a gift for the 'hard to buy for man' is a good choice because: They will get more support for worn out knees and be able to enjoy activities The comfort and fit makes it easy to wear, so they will use it regularly With less knee pain they are more positive about exercising and working out They can get back to enjoying physical activities they may have given up because of knee damage.

So forget the socks and undies this year and give the men in your life a new lease on life with a quality knee support the will love to wear.

The EzyFit Knee Brace is fully adjustable, has strong velcro closures and silicon grip strips to keep it in place. With an open patella and dual stabilizers to fully support the knee while being comfortable to wear.

The EzyFit Adjustable Knee support is available at Amazon.com
