

[sic]titious: The next BIG party game coming this spring.

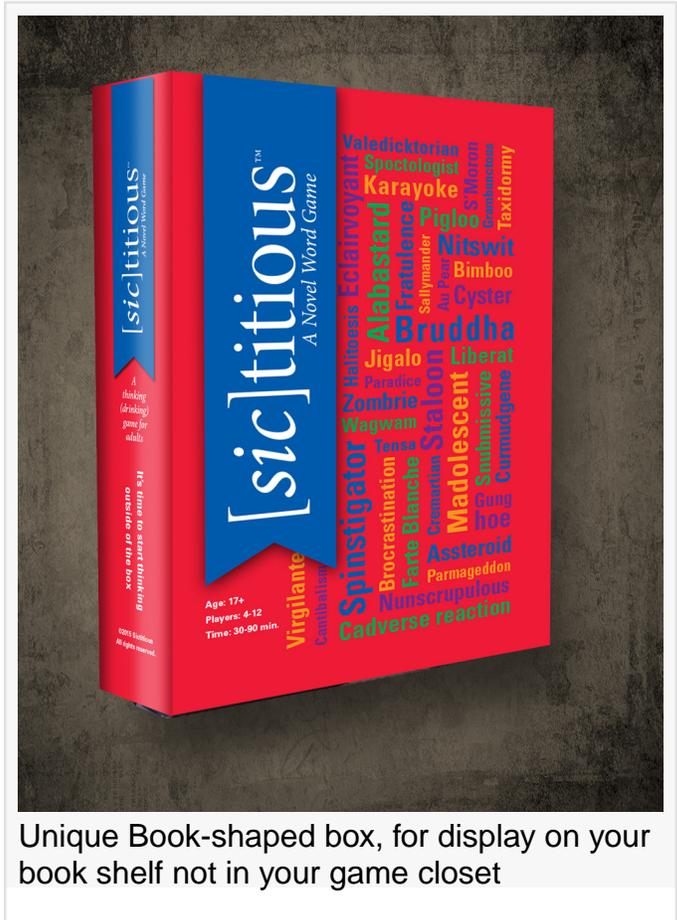

This novel new word game reveals just how clever and [sic] you, your friends and family really are!

SEATTLE, WA, UNITED STATES, January 21, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Conceived of by Johanna Sherman and Lori Christopher, longtime Seattle advertising creatives, [sic]titious™ is a game that takes raucous word play to a whole new level. It can be played by 4 to 12 players and has a mix of PG13 friendly and NSFW words. Fresh off a successful Kickstarter campaign, their game is in production and will be available for purchase this spring.

So, how do you play? Maybe you should ask, how do you define fun?

How about Acrobat . . . S'moron . . . Broomerang . . . Madolescent . . .Zombie?

In [sic]titious, anything goes. Your only limitation is just how creative or crass you are willing to be. Unlike games where you rely on the hand you are dealt, in this game you rely on your own imagination to come up with the winning answer. And as you will soon discover, you just never know where someone's mind will take them.

Unique Book-shaped box, for display on your book shelf not in your game closet

The word card deck is loaded with 100 intentionally tragic misspelled words. The more odd, inappropriate and irreverent — the better. It makes coming up with definitions a lot more fun! Just flip a card, flip the timer and come up with a definition. Players then award their [sic], [sic]er and [sic]est point cards for what they think are the best definitions.

Whoever has the most points at the end gets all the braggin' rights, rules the day and wins the dubious distinction of being one [sic] puppy.

We were still laughing about some of the definitions days after playing. Can't wait to play again . . .

Bill W.

The game comes in a unique book-shaped box, theme-specific expansion packs will be available to add on and a multi-player app game is in development. [sic]titious will be available on Amazon in the spring of 2016.

One word they would like to obliterate. As their way of honoring friends and family who have inspired them throughout their creative lives who have dealt with the horror of cancer, the creators are donating 5% of ALL proceeds from the Kickstarter campaign to the American Cancer Society.

“Proof positive that you just never know how sick and demented your friends really are. It’s a riot.”
Karen E.

“Sictitious is so brilliant! It's a perfect combination of scrabble, pictionary, and cards against humanity.”
Blair D.
