With a burgeoning middle class and aging population the demand for healthcare is stronger than ever in Thailand. As the country is the number one destination for medical tourism in the world, a member of ASEAN and of the forthcoming ASEAN Economic Community, greater understanding of the Thai pharma and healthcare sectors is vital for all stakeholders.

It features interviews with senior executives from major companies in Thailand and leaders of some of the country's most important institutions, updated facts and figures on Thailand's healthcare and pharma sectors, and feature stories.

The Thailand Healthcare and Life Sciences Report 2015 includes features and articles on:

Healthcare in Thailand

How Thailand remains a good country to do business in despite political and economic uncertainty and how the country's universal healthcare system positions it as a regional leader.

Thailand's Pharmaceuticals Market

How companies are adapting to the rapidly changing Thai market and the roles of growing wealth, aging and medical tourism in stimulating demand for medicine.

Research and Development

How the Thai state has identified R&D as an essential tool to help escape the middle-income trap and is now investing heavily in it.

The report includes interviews and conversations with:

Judy Benn, American Chamber of Commerce in Thailand
Nopporn Cheanklin, Government Pharmaceutical Organization (GPO)
John Clare, DKSH Thailand
Nares Damrongchai, Thailand Center of Excellence for Life Sciences (TCELS).
Tatsuya Ikeda, Daiichi Sankyo (full interview)
Toyoyuki Kamide, OLIC
Busakorn Lerswatanasivalee, Thai Pharmaceutical Research & Manufacturers Association (PReMA)
