

Disc Disease Solutions, Inc. Releases New Cervical Traction Collar

Disc Disease Solutions, a medical device company with products designed to help patients with back pain, releases the DDS Cervitrac

HACKENSACK, NJ, UNITED STATES, January 21, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Disc Disease Solutions recently announced the release of the DDS Cervitrac, their new cervical traction collar. It's the first cervical traction device designed to give the patient the option for treatment while in the supine or ambulatory position.

The Cervitrac uses DDS's unique and patented Vertical Air Pressure

Technology to gently stretch the neck, relieving pressure applied on muscles and pinched nerves. The new product is designed for comfort and mobility – while other products require users to lie down for treatment or restrict them to a doorway, the DDS Cervitrac is the first device that lets the patient choose pneumatic traction in their preferred position – lying down, sitting up or walking around.

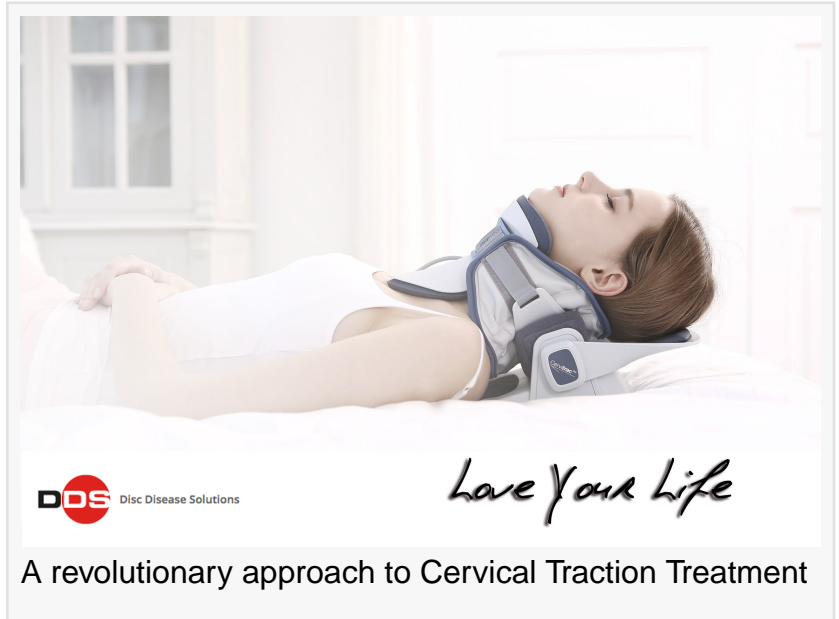

"We are proud to announce the release of the new DDS Cervitrac Cervical Traction Collar," said John Lee, CEO of Disc Disease Solutions. "We've designed the most comprehensive cervical traction device on the market today. We believe the Cervitrac can be a great benefit for those in need of at-home neck pain relief in addition to standard treatment by clinical health physicians."

The DDS Cervitrac is the newest addition to the Disc Disease Solutions product line that's designed to relieve patients of pain drug-free using revolutionary technology. Their lumbar, cervical and knee braces aid those with spine diseases and injuries such as herniated/bulging discs, spinal stenosis, degenerative disc disease, spondylolysis and osteoarthritis in the knee.
