Nimbus Co-Founders GGGarth Richardson and Bob Ezrin with Ross Fahy

“We are thrilled to be able to offer this exciting opportunity to an aspiring young Irish music producer and engineer,” said Rosaleen Malloy, National Director of Music Generation.

Out of 75 applications, and a rigorous screening process, including interviews, twenty-year-old Ross

Fahy of Galway, was selected as the winner of the Music Generation Audio Engineering & Music Production Scholarship. Ross is currently enrolled in the Nimbus Advanced Music Production program.

Everyone at Nimbus is thrilled to have Ross join us. I am pleased that we have joined with Music Generation to provide this unique experience to an aspiring young music entrepreneur.

Bob Ezrin

The partnership between Nimbus and Music Generation is a natural one as U2 and Nimbus co-founder Bob Ezrin have been friends for many years. Ezrin and The Edge co-founded Music Rising to rescue the musical culture of the Central Gulf region of the United States by replacing the musical instruments lost in the destruction caused by the catastrophic hurricanes Katrina and Rita in 2005.

“This is an incredible opportunity for a young Irish producer or audio engineer to live in Vancouver and study at Nimbus, one of the world’s leading music production schools. Partnering with such a globally recognised music institution is very exciting for Music Generation, and a well-deserved step towards a future career in music for Ross.” - The Edge

“Everyone at Nimbus is thrilled to have Ross join us here at the school,” said Bob Ezrin. “I am pleased that we have joined with Music Generation to provide this unique experience to an aspiring young music entrepreneur.”

Ross arrived in Vancouver late August 2015, and is currently in his fifth month of a 12 month diploma at Nimbus:

“Nimbus is a step above. It’s real world training,” said Fahy. “The class sizes are much smaller and it’s very hands on. Everything I’m learning here is gold, and all the students are on a similar vibe, which is really cool. There are no egos. Everyone is here for the same reason and there’s a shared common bond.”
