

SHARON NEEDLES KICKS OFF HEY QWEEN! SEASON FOUR

Jonny McGovern and Lady Red Couture are back!

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, February 15, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Hey Qween!, the world's gayest talk show of all time, is back for another raucous season of fun, kicking off with Sharon Needles <https://youtu.be/M9wxgHmZDDEthetst>. The show returns for its fourth season at theStream.tv on Monday, February 15th, with a sexy new look and sound.

For three hilarious seasons, comedian Jonny McGovern and his co-host Lady Red Couture have welcomed many of the countries top LGBT and drag talent – including RuPaul, Laganga Estranja, and Candis Cayne – to their couch. “Hey Qween! is a place for gay stars and underground legends to come and tell their stories in a way they can’t on any other talk show,” explains host and executive producer, Jonny McGovern. “We cut up, have a kiki and a gay ‘ol time. Then, at the end of every show, the special guest gets a trophy and a lap dance from one of our in-house strippers! It's a half hour of pure merriment.”

“You don't have to be gay to be on Hey Qween!,” he adds. “Just gay friendly and ready for fun.”

Lots of changes are in store for the upcoming season of Hey Qween! including a brand new set and the addition of a regular cast member. Billboard charting vocalist Adam Joseph joins the gang as bandleader of “Adam Joseph and The Go To Bed Wigs”.

“For years our show has been called The Tonight Show if Johnny Carson was a big gay lumberjack and Ed McMahon was the largest drag queen in captivity,” continues McGovern. “Now we got a glittery twink version of Doc Severinsen.”

Adam Joseph has a long association with Jonny McGovern. He is the voice of the Hey Qween! theme song and the music producer behind all of McGovern's albums. The addition of a bandleader will mean more music parodies and comedy to the show. Also new will be a series of "Drag Besties" episodes, kicking off with Detox and Vicky Vox of the Drag supergroup DWV.

Fan-favorite segments returning this season are "Betta As a Bitch Track", where the show trolls the trolls, turning real life negative comments from the Internet into over-the-top "bitch tracks" and the "Look At Huh!" game, where guests share their personal stories of celebrities.

Jonny "The Gay Pimp" McGovern's career began in 2003 with Dirty Gay Hits, a collection of hilarious gay themed songs. The video release of "Soccer Practice" from the album received over three million downloads and was added to rotation on MTV Europe and MTV Asia, making Jonny an international phenomenon. Soon, he was appearing all over the airwaves, on The Ricky Lake Show, VH1's Best Week Ever, Comedy Central's Out on the Edge, and more. Jonny eventually caught the eye of Rosie O'Donnell, who cast him as a lead player on her LOGO-TV comedy show, The Big Gay Sketch Show.

"Working with Jonny is one of the joys of my life," says Lady Red Couture from the Hey Qween! set in Hollywood. "He's so sweet. I'll never forget when RuPaul came to visit and we were filming the opening banter and I messed up. So Jonny says, 'Don't be nervous because RuPaul is here.' Then RuPaul says, 'DO be nervous because RuPaul is here!' Oh, I wet myself laughing!"

"We've become the best of friends making Hey Qween!" reflects Jonny McGovern of his relationship with Lady Red Couture. "She's such a quick wit and naturally funny. People think that because I'm executive producer of the show, I also direct her. You don't ever make Lady Red do anything. If she's eating on the show, its cause the bitch wants a snack! I just let Lady Red be herself and that's more than enough."

Hey Qween! has been so successful for theStream.tv, the online network launched the show as its own YouTube channel www.youtube.com/heyqweentv and stand-alone website <http://heyqween.tv/>.

The show has also spawned several spin-offs, including the Look At Huh! aftershow that began airing last spring. In March, theStream.tv will begin airing the second seasons of: Judge Lady Red, a court show with Lady Red presiding over the disputes of young queens and deciding whether it's 'Shade' or 'No Shade'; He's Fit, a parody of fitness shows starring lap dancer Greg McKeon as he competes in flex battles against Instagram hotties; and Hot T, a bi-monthly gossip show with Julie Goldman and Brandy Howard (from Bravo's The People's Couch) breaking down the hot topics of the week. A new advice show, Hey Qween Can I Axe You A Question?, will premiere later this season.

"We're thrilled to bring back Hey Qween! for a fourth season," says theStream.tv's Susan Wrenn. "Jonny and Lady Red are both so talented and passionate about what they do. Their creativity inspires everyone here at theStream.tv."

Look for Jonny McGovern and Lady Red Couture this summer when they host Pride Festivals and bring their Hey Qween! nightclub show to cities across the country.

The fourth season of Hey Qween! begins airing February 15th on theStream.tv.
