Your claim should always be filed as soon as possible following the event that caused the damage. Drivers should not put off this important step. Many people only think of filing a claim immediately after a collision. However, claims should be filed for any type event that results in damage to your vehicle. Vandalism is one example of an event that may be covered. Damage from severe weather or a fire may also be covered by your policy. A wide range of coverage can be found by searching for car insurance in Salt Lake City.

“Even if you are unsure of your policy coverage, it is important to file a claim,” says Creed Anderson of ASA Insurance, a premier auto insurance company in Salt Lake City. “Talking to your agent about a plan of action is the best way to find out all of the options available to you.”

Your car insurer is able to help guide you through the claim process from beginning to end. Be prepared for your initial call to your insurance company by having all of the necessary information on hand. You will need to provide your policy number and other personal information to establish your identity. Gather as much information as possible about the event that occurred in order to pass on every available detail to your insurer. Even information that you may not feel is noteworthy may be of importance to the claim.

Keep a copy of the names, addresses and phone numbers of all of the drivers involved in the accident. Request contact information from any available witnesses as well. Driver's license and license plate numbers should also be recorded. If a police report was filed you will want to request a copy of the report.

Some drivers are hesitant to make a claim for fears that their rates will go up. Don't let this fear keep you from filing a claim. Insurance is designed to provide compensation for your damages. It is important to know that rates do not always increase following an accident. If you weren't at fault for the accident your rates may not increase. Many policies also include accident forgiveness in order to prevent rate hikes. Search auto insurance in Salt Lake City in order to find out more about filing auto claims.
