

New Commentary Suggests Gene-Eden-VIR as an Alternative Treatment for Cervical Cancer

The commentary by Hanan Polansky and Will Blesch was published in the Journal of Cervical Cancer.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, March 21, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ --

The Center for the Biology of Chronic Disease (CBCD) announces the publication of a new medical commentary on the potential of Gene-Eden-VIR, a natural antiviral oral supplement, as an alternative treatment for cervical cancer. The commentary, written by Hanan Polansky and Will Blesch was published on March 17, 2016 in the Journal of Cervical Cancer. The commentary lists studies, which have shown that Gene-Eden-VIR is antiviral against the human papillomavirus (HPV). Additionally, the commentary references a paper published in Acta Oncologica, which discussed the anti-tumor effects of Gene-Eden-VIR. (1)

Gene-Eden-VIR should be considered by medical professionals as an alternative treatment for cervical cancer caused by the HPV.

Hanan Polansky

The authors of the commentary quoted a clinical study that “specifically measured the effect of Gene-Eden-VIR on “genital warts, low and high grade cervical dysplasia, (and) abnormal Pap smear results ...the results showed that, “Seventy three percent (30/41) of the individuals treated with Gene-Eden-VIR reported a decrease in these symptoms (and symptoms of other viruses).” (1)

The authors of the commentary concluded that “Gene-Eden-VIR should be considered by medical professionals as an alternative treatment for cervical cancer caused by the HPV.” (1)
