“We are very happy to see our cabinet locks hit the market,” commented Catherine Anderson, a spokesperson from the company. “This is a product we feel completely confident in and we know it will deliver huge value to our customers and their families.”

According to Safe-T-Ter-Tots, each order of Child Safety Locks features eight locks. The locks themselves deliver a number of benefits. Some highlights include: being super easy to install and remove; the locks do not damage cabinets or drawers in anyway; and they are made of the highest quality material, free from sharp edges, dangerous chemicals or anything else that could put a baby at risk.

Early feedback from customers has been very positive.

Kelsey recently said in a five star review at Amazon.com, "I got these child safety locks because my 11-month old was starting to get into the cabinets and other areas he shouldn't have access to. We put one on our French Door Refrigerator to keep the 2-year old out. This works great because she cannot reach the lock and it keeps the fridge secure. The 3M tape sticks very well. When I installed the first set on our cabinet doors, I stretched the locks a little too far apart and had to restick it just a tiny bit closer. I put one lock on our lower cabinet and my 2-year old could reach it and attempts to open it, but hasn't figured it out yet. I think that these locks would be good for cabinets you can put the lock up higher, out of reach from little hands that are tempted to undue them. The popping is a little hard the first few times, but it loosens just enough with time. I would recommend these to friends with my review!"
