Global Ammonium Sulphate Market: Market Growth Influencer:

The global ammonium sulphate market is mainly relied on the several aspects for instance, the stringent environmental policies and regulations and fertilizer industry. That is why the huge portion of ammonium sulphate is produced involuntarily as by product or co-product. Ammonium sulphate is one of the major fertilizers used across the global and the demand for the particular fertilizer is rising rapidly as there is very limited arable land available across the globe. Ammonium sulphate is majorly used in the applications such as agriculture and non-agriculture. Rapid increasing in population has resulted in increasing demand for ammonium sulphate as it is a major fertilizer used in the agricultural and non agricultural purpose. The ammonium sulphate market has an abundant opportunity as the current trends are shifting towards expanding crop yield by expanding nutrient and supplement contents for instance sulfur and nitrogen in soil is expected to have positive effect on the overall market growth. Lack of government initiatives in undeveloped economies and stringent rules and regulation especially in the developed regions such as the US, UK, France and Germany are the major challenges for the global ammonium sulphate market growth.

Global Ammonium Sulphate Market: Market Segmentation

For the purpose of the study of global ammonium sulphate market, the market has segmented into the production process and by applications. The production process is segmented into caprolactam, coke oven gas, gypsum and neutralization & others and the application type is segmented into agriculture uses (fertilizers) and non-agricultural uses (chemicals, wood pulp, textile and pharmaceutical).

Global Ammonium Sulphate Market: Regional Analysis

North America and Europe is considered as matured economy and having an established agricultural sector therefore the ammonium sulphate market has a strong hold in these particular regions. Asia-Pacific is one of the leading markets for global ammonium sulphate market with an estimated market share of XX% in 2015. Availability of huge agricultural land in China and India are the major leading growing factor for global ammonium sulphate market. As these both regions covered huge percentage of population and a major portion of population is involved in agriculture too. Thus, the demand for ammonium sulphate as a fertilizer is very much increased with a span of years. This region is expected to witness a market growth of XX% over the forecasted period of 2016-2027.
