

Marlene Alt arrives as Gettysburg's Artist-in-Residence for 2016

Will make site-specific installation as part of Residency Program

GETTYSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA, USA, May 10, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The National Parks Arts Foundation (NPAF) continues its Gettysburg National Military Park residency program by bringing Marlene Alt to work and live in the battlefield and memorial park for the May/June residency period. Ms. Alt, a sculptor, installation and multi-media artist, is based in Ashland, Oregon.

Ongoing throughout 2016, NPAF, through the generous support of The Gettysburg Foundation, and with the cooperation of the National Park Service is bringing eight innovative artists to the nation's premier battlefield park to work and interact with visitors. Each Artist will be featured during Gettysburg's "First Friday" events at the historic Gettysburg Lincoln Railroad Station and give other presentations to the public during their residency.

Marlene Alt's work activates the often melancholy material traces of everyday culture to resonate with and awaken dislocations in different material constructions (such as installations) to create new locations that bear their own cultural force. She calls these new created places symbolic landscapes. Alt's fascination with the rich interaction between inner landscape of culture and history and the outer landscape of natural phenomena is what drew her to the battlefields and outbuildings at Gettysburg. About her work, she says, "my installation work is focused on

To inspire, engage and connect with a new generation of artists and visitors, Gettysburg National Military Park and the Gettysburg Foundation has greatly expanded an "Artist in Residency" program this year, hosting leading artists on the Gettysburg battlefield for month-long residencies from March through November. A total of eight artists will be hosted at the battlefield in 2016. The program was created in cooperation with the non-profit National Parks Arts Foundation (http://www.nationalparksartsfoundation.org/) and with the Gettysburg Foundation (http://www.gettysburgfoundation.org/).

"Artists-in-Residence are creating new connections with the Gettysburg community and with the American public," said Ed W. Clark, superintendent of Gettysburg National Military Park. "The artists are telling Gettysburg's stories in new, compelling ways that inspire people to learn more and help preserve these special places."

Gettysburg Foundation President Joanne Hanley said, "Gettysburg's NPAF Artists-in-Residence adds an artistic dimension to how Gettysburg's stories are shared as our visitors are able to experience an artist's interpretation of the park and its history, meet the artists in person, and engage and connect with them as they express, through art, the power of this place."
