

Sporting Goods Company Slashes Their Running Belt Max Price for National Running Day

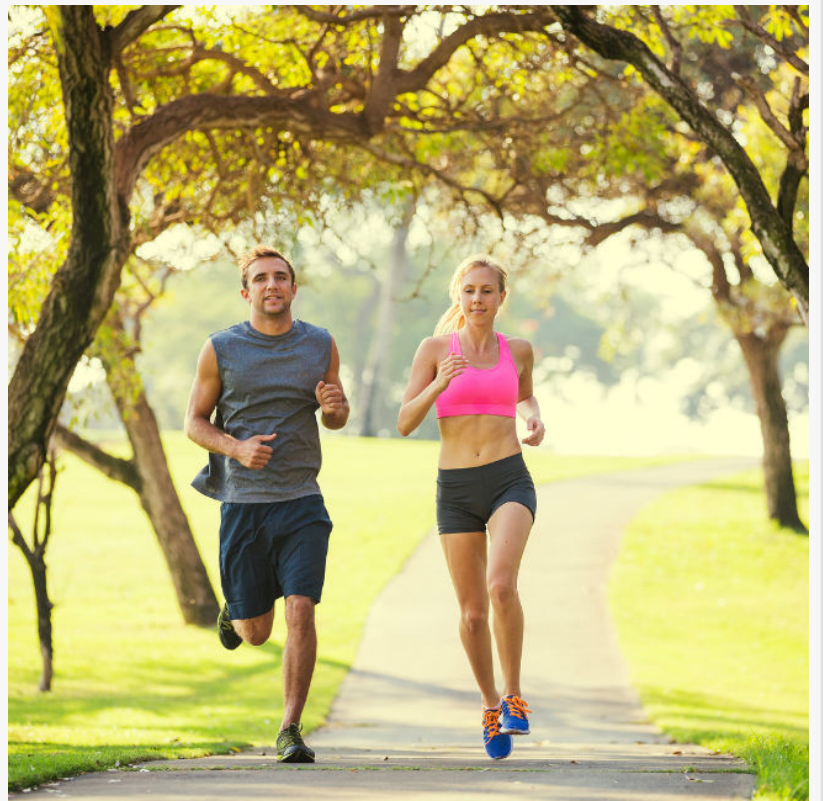

With a steady decline in kids and adults alike becoming physically active, this obscure holiday is worth taking a look at.

ASHEBORO, N.C., UNITED STATES, May 11, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- National Running Day is June 1, 2016 – an important holiday for people who want to become active and for runners of all levels. The holiday originated in 2009 to create awareness for both veteran runners and for people who are interested in starting a running program. Many experts agree running is a great way to get in shape, or to stay in shape. But running isn't just a great way to be fit. It can increase one's health as it has been proven to lower blood pressure, reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease and eliminate obesity. Running can also prevent osteoporosis and even strengthen the knees, contrary to popular belief.

To celebrate National Running Day, beginning runners can simply go to the gym and get on the treadmill, or even run in their neighborhood. Intermediate and advanced runners can participate in organized 5k, 10k, half-marathon, and full-marathon races.

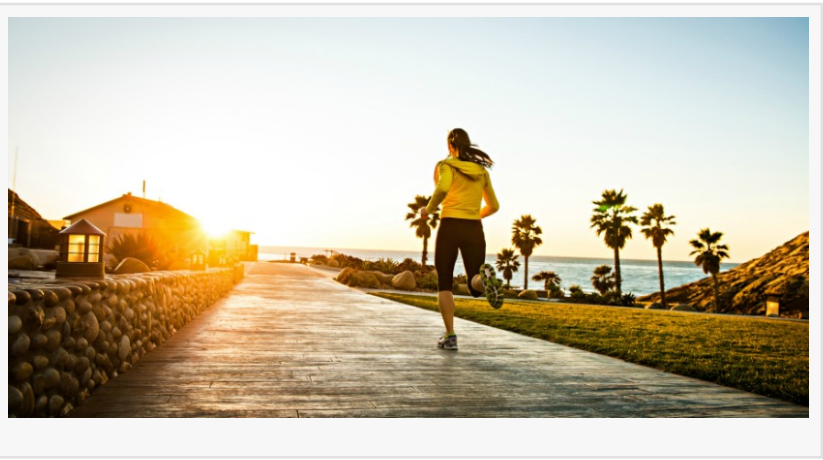

“Even a brisk 10-minute walk works wonders for your body and mind”, said Dave Chandler, president of Running Belt Max.

The team at Running Belt Max is doing their part to create awareness for National Running Day by discounting their top-selling running belt by almost 25%.

“We’ve spent nearly six months designing and developing our running belt with the help of a team of seasoned runners, and we think we’ve created the perfect running belt” said Dave Chandler. “National Running Day is approaching and we wanted to do our part to help promote awareness about running and staying active.”

By partnering with Amazon, sales have been strong, and their running belt was named one Amazon’s Hot New Releases in February.

Even though consumers are happy to pay for good quality, the team at Running Belt Max has reduced their running belt price from $29.99 to $22.95 to recognize the holiday.
