

New mHealth Application for health threats early detection launched today

Sylex Technologies, an eHealth systems developer in several countries, launched "YouShield" mHealth Application for health threats early detection.

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, USA, May 24, 2016

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Sylex Technologies today announced the release of YouShield application for iOS and Android. A new smartphone application is a sophisticated tool that performs health checkup based on user-provided symptoms and health data and is able to generate personalized health risk assessment reports.

YouShield mobile application has been created by Sylex Technologies LLC, a renowned developer of national eHealth system software in several European and Asian countries. The application is designed to empower general audience with knowledge of good health standards and give them the opportunity to self-managed health status tracking. Smart algorithms based on Sylex Technologies' know-how research provide analysis of user-entered symptoms and lab tests data. The application provides the list of necessary lab tests, based on individual risk.

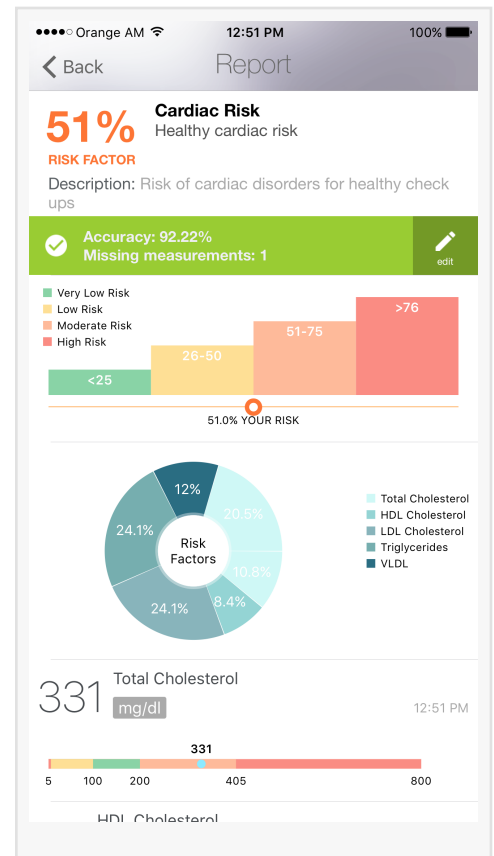

Avet Manukyan, the founder of Sylex Technologies says "YouShield improves healthcare outcomes through early detection, patient education and engagement. Due to early threat detection it helps users to live long and healthy life."

The application functions without compulsory registration and doesn't require any personal information. It is easy-to-use and has flexible and intuitive interface. YouShield app stores historical data about user symptoms, complaints and lab results on user's device. New data can be added, changed or deleted at any time. The app is launched in the Apple App Store and Google Play on May 23rd, 2016 and may be downloaded for free.
