

Liliana Hernandez Montes and forced disappearance of Álvaro Ignacio Ordóñez

What ended up joining the fate of these two characters was the desire for power and enrichment.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA, May 26, 2016

/EINPresswire.com/ -- You can not talk about threats, torture, kidnapping, murder and/or the forced disappearance of politician and MD Alvaro Ignacio Ordóñez without first explaining who Liliana Hernandez Montes is : an unknown lawyer, thirsty for power and money, decides to cross the path of Alvaro Ignacio Ordóñez a future mayor of la Villa of San Benito Abad, Sucre. She infiltrates recognised families in the region, far from her origins, meaning with no class affiliations, poised for results, without a real culture. At 16-years of age she pretends to be rebel: Using the old method of small-town women, she conceived two children: Silvio Alfredo Padron Hernandez and Andres Padron Hernandez both became involved in corruption-participation in the future business dealings and carousel of contracts. This immoral woman's subsequent university studies and her new family situation gave her for a certain period the appeal of a "respectable dame". When her marriage fell apart, the aforementioned children were raised by Sonia Sunana Montes Sierra and Alfredo Hernandez Solipas, her parents who live in a populist working-class neighbourhood.

Alvaro Ignacio Ordóñez came from a good family, was cheerful, friendly, handsome, charismatic and very much a womaniser. He liked beautiful women and they loved him. Although the ambitious lawyer

The great problem for Liliana Hernandez Montes as we will see, was that when she came into Dr. Ordóñez's life he already had a son in the region which was without a doubt his biological offspring.

concerned was lacklustre, obese, without charisma, hypocritical, manipulative, from a young age she had observed that local success had little to do with attractive features. The power of money mattered; it didn't matter if the person was ugly or beautiful. In the field of coastal policy, contracts and power were situated within alcoves. Subsequently, the millions stolen from the state allowed her to undergo multiple plastic surgeries that now made her look more acceptable. Dr Ordóñez and this corrupt Liliana Hernandez matched just because both had coastal origins. He had roots in Cartagena and her in paramilitary regions Monteria and Sincelejo. He graduated as Medical Doctor from the University of Cartagena. In Sucre's region he had become distinguished as an excellent surgeon. His dad, a Medical Doctor from Cartagena, kept him abreast of the techniques of success, guiding him from an early age. Ordóñez's talent led him to become the most appreciated surgeon in the region. He liked that place but especially as an escape since it was the case from very young that he flew away from a deleterious family environment where reigned a pathologically violent mother. The farther could get from it the better he felt. He could not know, however, that when he became mayor of San Benito Abad the family past would catch up with him.

Liliana Hernandez's goal was to find a way to get out of her house. She never had a wide view of things but rather was firmly inculcated in the views of the region. She neither bonded nor breeder with the local bourgeoisie. Instead she has complexes because of her looks and developed an impetuous desire to position herself in certain social spheres. This prompted her to learn how to be corrupt in her career, in her public and private life, things in which she became an expert, outstanding! Her subsequent history is a legacy of corruption, a lack of morality, learned within her family in business dealings on which she bequeaths benefits on all them, including the children he has had with different men. The goal was always to make them all forget her youth escapades. Clearly, to possess without looking at the source of the money was an emotional value within the Hernandez, including the children of this woman. The Hernandez Montes are certainly honourable scammers : sisters and brothers were known from Coast to Bogota from running behind political contracts. Hernandez's brother was in ruin when Dr. Ordóñez appeared in the landscape but with contracts managed by his sister Liliana at the town hall of San Benito Abad and other places, he thrived in the agricultural machinery industry. Scriptures prove that one of his SAS currently reports a profit where their family members are included, mainly including his wife. It is worth pointing out that the money has never been able to buy them any social prestige. They continue to reflect the image of rural Hillbilly commoners. Hernandez corrupt sister Silvia stole in 2012 the statutes of a small business set up by the sister in law of Dr. Ordóñez. It is to her and her family that Silvio Padron the son of the corrupt lawyer, uttered threats against the only sister of Dr. Ordóñez, stating that "she could never again return to Colombia" simply because she sought to know what happened to her brother!

Dr. Ordóñez forged in Sincelejo great social support and para-political influence, people who saw him as a chance to replace the ruling bourgeoisie. His popularity was advantageous. The corrupt lawyer Hernandez handling the main business managed to achieve power to embed his life in Bogota, increasingly influential realms and got herself appointed as political adviser to Dr.Ordóñez's office...she also broke into his bedroom! In her calculated plan she claimed to become pregnant by Dr. Ordóñez. With her same handwriting she announced this event and intrusions into the politics to the only sister of Dr. Ordóñez, asking her to be the godmother of that child! He never pronounced on this decision because Ordóñez himself and the region knew the joyful debacles in the bedroom of the woman attorney and those who were said to play star roles there.

The great problem for Hernandez was the son Ordóñez already had. Although he wanted to preserve his freedom, his mother had as a targeted mission in this situation to hide the presence of the grandson she had in Sucre. She despised the fact that he came from humble beginnings. The maternal influence was disastrous. The manipulation of that mother on her sons ended up destroying an entire family. Pressing entry of the corrupt Hernandez Montes in her family and in the lives of her sons she signed the death warrant of her own son...unconsciously, but irrevocably .
