"I'm really excited about our version of the National Anthem," Austin Craichy said. "I am proud to be an American, so naturally, this song is quite special to me."

Austin said that when the KAJ Brothers were working on the song and video (produced by award-winning producer and director Kyle Saylors), they wanted to strip the song down to strictly vocals (acapella) so the power of the lyrics would be illuminated.

"If you close your eyes and really listen," Austin said, "you can see the song. This is what music is meant to do."

Kyle Craichy is also excited about how well their new version of The Star Spangled Banner has been received.

"Our country has had a lot of issues come up that seems to be dividing us and we wanted to do what we could to bring everyone together as Americans," Kyle said. "This is one of those songs that brings us together as Americans no matter what is going on in the country; politics are set aside, just uniting under our amazing flag."

The KAJ Brothers are an amazing, talented trio of young male artists who have crafted a unique style of harmonies and sophisticated Pop/R&B sound that distinguishes itself by its reinvention of romance filled orchestral sounds similar to Michael Buble', Harry Connick, Jr., Frank Sinatra, N'Sync, Boyz II Men, and Kenny Rogers. The multi-talented Orlando based trio consists of 22-year old Kyle Craichy, vocals, piano, guitar, and dance; 20-year old sibling Austin Craichy, vocals, piano, guitar, drums, and dance; and 29-year old Johnny Atys, vocalist and national dance champion, who rounds out the group. Kyle and Austin were born in Tampa and raised in Orlando, while Johnny is originally from Paris, France.

The KAJ Brothers regularly work with Orlando's renowned producer/vocal coach Gerry Williams who crafted the boy band sound for N'Sync and The Back Street Boys.
