Global Credit Czar and Child Protector David Howe

“Today I had a very engaging discussion with a representative at the LeBron James Family Foundation,” acknowledged David Howe, president of SubscriberWise. “We talked about Mr. James and his philanthropy. We talked about Mr. James’ commitment to the people of Ohio and the nation. We talked about child identity fraud and its very serious consequences. We also talked about Mr. James’ advocacy for this cause. I respectfully asked Mr. James to join SubscriberWise’s effort to protect our nation’s children – including Mr. James’ own kids. At the request of Mr. James’ foundation, I provided the following statement and information:”

We need the help and advocacy of LeBron James to solve this problem once and for all.”

president and CEO*

Dear Brennan: Thank you for taking my call today and expressing your genuine concerns about the serious issue of child identity theft. I really do appreciate the time and conversation!

At your request, I'd like to provide you with my contact information, including the published news that we discussed, for Mr. James to consider. I also want to reiterate my invitation for Mr. James to visit our offices in Massillon, OH, to have a first-hand demonstration of child identity theft and to understand our most diligent efforts to protect children across the nation.

We're actually in close proximity to Mr. James' home area. If it's more convenient, it would be my pleasure to arrange transportation to our office. It would even be my pleasure to personally pick up

Mr. James and return him after the meeting.

SubscriberWise (www.subscriberwise.com) is the nation's largest issuing consumer reporting agency for the telecommunications industry. We're also the leading protector of children victimized by identity theft nationwide. Our goal is to accomplish a legislative change at the federal level to mitigate child identity theft through technology and education. And it's critically important that Mr. James understand that even his own children are at risk of victimization because of the failure of lawmakers to address this problem.

Frankly Brennan, we need the help and advocacy of LeBron James to solve this problem once and for all. Please be sure Mr. James hears this plea!

P.S. I know hardly anything about basketball and sports in general. I'm definitely no world-class athlete like Mr. James and I was never good at basketball either. However, I'm willing to play a game with Mr. James if he's interested or insists on a friendly match to ensure the meeting.

"Mr. James is not only among the greatest athletes the world has ever known, he's also a businessman, philanthropist, Ohioan, and neighbor," stated Howe. "Most importantly, he's a father. And tragically – like children everywhere in this nation – Mr. James' children are also at risk of identity fraud since Congress has been asleep at the wheel. Today I asked Mr. James to help me solve this problem once and for all.

"Yes, I'm convinced that if Mr. James invests just 1 percent of the energy he devoted for the people of Ohio and the Cleveland Cavaliers, then children everywhere can finally breathe a sigh of relief. The cycle of victimization and suffering-in-silence can finally be a tragedy of the past," concluded Howe.
