

New trivia books test political knowledge

Books quiz you on how much you know about Clinton, Trump

SEATTLE, USA, July 1, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The primary season is winding down for what may be the most unusual presidential election in U.S. history. Garden-variety citizens as well as political junkies are hooked following each day's developments as they are reported in the news. Author Devin Metzger has put together what he terms "four completely unauthorized quiz books" about the candidates who remained standing the longest.

Each book contains 100 questions: "How Well Do You Know Hillary Clinton?"; "How Well Do You Know Ted Cruz?"; "How Well Do You Know Bernie Sanders?"; and "How Well Do You Know Donald Trump?". The two candidates who do not end up on the ballot in November are sure to make news at the party conventions. Readers can use the books to play trivia games alone or with friends.

Devin Metzger said, "Celebrities are constantly under the microscope. Whether they like it or not, the personal details of their lives are splashed across various broadsheets, glossies and websites for our entertainment and amusement. Part of me loves learning about celebs and living vicariously through them. I unconsciously stuff my brain with random facts that I like to whip out at parties. At one party, a friend of mine said, 'Why don't you turn all that trivia into a book?' The suggestion stuck in my mind and these books are the result. They contain facts interesting to me, and I hope others find them interesting, too."

The author describes himself as a new media and social media junkie who spends most of his time reading and writing about major players on today's stage. Continuing this habit is a sure enabler for making his trivia collection even larger.
