Analysts forecast the global laser distance meter market to grow at a CAGR of 3.88% during the period 2016-2020. Summary

Laser Distance Meter Industry

Laser distance meter (LDM) are used in different industries such as construction and real estate. They have applications like finding out electrical wiring and furniture length in carpentry, interior designing, and carpet flooring. Professional contractors such as solar energy solution providers are widely using them for panel installation and commissioning. The demand for LDMs has grown in line with the rising requirement for construction applications such as flooring. LDMs have become an important tool for the majority of professional contractors as they help in fast and accurate measurement of floor dimensions. LDMs have seen a lot of advances in terms of accuracy, size, and weight. There are high-end LDMs like Bosch GLR 825, Fluke 424, and Leica S910 which offer additional features like angle measurement, Pythagoras function (to measure indirect dimensions when the line of sight is obscure), and camera for a 4x zoom.
