PUNE, INDIA, July 20, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- COMPLETE REPORT DETAILS @ <https://www.wiseguyreports.com/reports/198231-global-robotics-packaging-robots-market2015-2019>

Packaging is a process of wrapping or covering a product to protect and preserve its inert quality from contamination or damage. It eases transportation, storage, and promotion of product to a large extent. Apart from providing convenience in handling products, it also includes essential information, such as price, contents, place of manufacturing or assembling, point of contact in the event of any issue with item, about the product. Packaging can be broadly classified as primary and secondary packaging.

The use of robots in primary and secondary packaging has increased over the last decade due to the increased demand for products ranging from FMCG to pharmaceutical products. Robots speed up the process of packaging by bringing more flexibility into the system and enhance the productivity of the plant.

Technavio's analysts forecast the global packaging robots market to grow at a CAGR of 8.60% over the period 2014-2019.
