I loved how I was so involved in the story. I genuinely reacted in a surprised and shocking manner, in that the script was so unpredictable

The screenplay is an optimistic and poignant look at youth homelessness in the vein of movies like “Mean Girls.” The story is about a book smart 12th grade high school student who leads a very sheltered life until one day she is tragically left homeless after the sudden death of her mother. On the streets she learns to stand up for herself and while sleeping rough she makes friends with a group of homeless teenagers. The new street-smart Amber outsmarts the school’s queen bee and when she discovers who really was the cause of her homelessness she hatches a plan with the help of her friends to get revenge on those who wronged her. The only problem is the web of deceit leads all the way to City Hall and some very powerful people are prepared to do anything to stop her.

The protagonist’s struggles against adversity and ultimate triumph gives hope to us all and raises awareness of our responsibility for our fellow human beings. “I believe it will appeal to a large cross-section of the population and the humor aspect is unique in that too many films focus on the negative aspects of homelessness but not the causes.”
