

Women are more intimate with their fridges than their boyfriends

Feelings for my Fridge

BOURNEMOUTH, UNITED KINGDOM, August 2, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ --

According to a new survey commissioned by appliance repair network Go Assist, British women prefer the cold comfort of their fridge and freezer than that of their partner.

A shocking 25 per cent of females admit to heading straight to their refrigerators when sad, claiming they feel much better comforted by the delicious contents than the support of their significant other.

The research also revealed that 24 per cent of us open our fridge an average of 10 times a day, while 7 per cent of us open it over 21 times a day!

That may not be so surprising when you consider the United Kingdom is a nation of tea drinkers.

Richard Waters, Managing Director of Go Assist said "Our Bournemouth office goes through a total of 2,160 pints of milk per year. As you can imagine, that's a lot of visits to the fridge!"

More interestingly, the same research shows that 27 per cent of women never hold hands with their partner, while 18 per cent do so only once per week.

Matching up the data reveals British women touch their fridge door handle at least 49 times more per week than they touch the hands of their lover.

When you think about it, these hilarious revelations are almost obvious. Who was there for you when you first watched Marley & Me and subsequently wanted to jump in front of a train? Who was there for you when your so-called friend didn't invite you to that outing? Who was there for you when your first crush rejected you? It's always been your fridge... hasn't it?

James Holden
Go Assist
2036420131
email us here

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/337973208>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2024 Newsmatics Inc. All Right Reserved.