

Los Angeles Councilmember Paul Koretz presents Certificate of Appreciation to New Media Film Festival

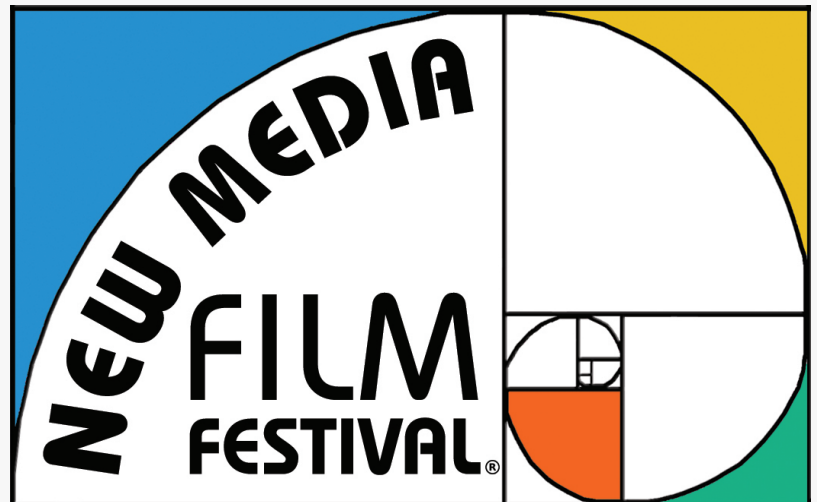

Through caring deeds and steadfast ways, the New Media Film Festival has helped make the City of Los Angeles a better place in which to live and create.

LOS ANGELES , CA, USA, August 8, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On opening night of the 7th Annual New Media Film Festival, Councilmember Paul Koretz Fifth District of Los Angeles California, stood before a packed theater of celebrities, emerging and established new media filmmakers, content creators and video artists preparing to present a Certificate of Appreciation to www.NewMediaFilmFestival.com

The New Media Film Festival began in 2009 with a strong slate of films from around the world. Since its inception, the festival has brought thousands of people together to view, discuss, buy and sell content across a variety of traditional and new media formats. New Media Film Festival is stronger than ever, at a crossroads of excellence and embodying a potential future that could literally take the world by storm.

As Councilmember Paul Koretz stood at the podium, he shared with the audience, "I am thrilled to be here at an event, New Media Film Festival that celebrates and recognizes the best in new media with over 125 New Media Films and content from 37 countries, many of which are premiering at this festival. I could not think of a better city where this kind of artistic and cultural exchange could take place, other than Los Angeles. This festival brings the globe to Los Angeles and Los Angeles to the globe."

Honoring Stories Worth Telling

Founder/Director Susan Johnston and Councilmember Paul Koretz Fifth District

In attendance were an array of talent such as Golden Globe & Emmy Nominee Ed Begley Jr., Golden Globe Winner Sally Kirkland, and 5 time Emmy Winner Paul Wagner. As well as judges from SAG/AFTRA, The Grammys, The Oscars and many more organizations.

With films, trailers, shorts, digital comics and web series that highlight new advancements in technology, financing, and convergence media, each entry is a chance to think differently about the world today.

The New Media Film Festival is one of the most unusual yet exciting festivals in the world. New Media Film Festival embodies the transformative power of the cinematic arts as it effectively welds together story and technology for everyone. It is inspiring to think about how new media is rapidly changing the
