There are so many variables that step in the way of progress. Between missed or lack of opportunities, lack of direction and issues with health, thankfully there are wonderful people like Lisa Latimer, Job and Life Coach, to assist and guide us along the way.

For her own experience, Lisa honorably spent years working with people suffering from acquired brain injuries. With affinity towards children, Lisa also committed herself to assisting children with autism. After the birth of her son, Lisa took some time off to raise a family and it was during this period that she understood her passion and dream of getting back in the workforce.

Incorporating certifications in coaching from Cognition Coaching and yoga certification from George Brown College, Lisa brings a uniquely passionate approach to working with her clients. Whether it's in person, phone or Skype sessions; Lisa's services are available to people across the globe including those suffering with Asperger's, their family, friends and teachers as well. It's her strong communicative skills that are truly immense assets to her coaching process.

With the foundation of New Horizons Job Coaching, Autism Coach Lisa works with people of all ages and all walks of life. The many services she offers are all featured at www.new-horizons-job-coaching.com and it's from her professional training, experience and her own battle with Asperger's Syndrome that enables her to focus on many different obstacles facing people today.

"In 2012, someone in my family got diagnosed with Asperger's. I also started to believe that I also have Asperger's. After doing some research on the Internet and also through communications with others on Facebook, I decided I would take on life coach training through Coaching Cognition and The School of Online Business. I was inspired through my peer coaching experiences to narrow down my focus to adults with Asperger's. I decided to offer them job coaching, life coaching and yoga (if they chose) as part of my business plan. Whether you're struggling with health or life decisions, it's important to have access to a safe place to work it out. This is what I provide for my clients. The mentoring and coaching process is amazing to be a part of as I guide my clients towards finding and obtaining their goals. I myself, grow in the process as well. The feeling is incredible," exclaims Latimer.
