

Video Series Answers Common Questions About Buying or Selling a Ranch

Lem Lewis, a veteran ranch broker and fourth-generation Texas rancher, addresses common questions about buying or selling a ranch in a series of short videos

BLANCO, TEXAS, UNITED STATES, August 22, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Buying or selling a ranch entails a great deal more than the typical home transaction.

Valuations are different. Tax considerations vary. Broker quality and commissions are unique. And the investment considerations are far more complex.

Lem Lewis, a veteran ranch broker and fourth-generation Texas rancher, addresses common questions about buying or selling a ranch in a new series of short videos now available on YouTube at <http://tinyurl.com/LemLewisVideos>.

Lem's full-service brokerage company, The Ranch Broker, has more than three decades' experience that allows him to close transactions efficiently and to the satisfaction of both buyers and sellers.

"Many of my clients choose me because of my experience. I grew up ranching on a property that my great-grandfather purchased in 1929," Lem explains. "I spend a lot of time on the ranch with my kids, teaching them how to appreciate the land as much as I do. Ranching is in my family's blood."

Lem's company concentrates on the Texas Hill Country, South Texas, and West Texas. His mission is to develop life-long relationships with his clients, built on trust and integrity.
